General Marking Guidance

- All candidates must receive the same treatment. Examiners must mark the first candidate in exactly the same way as they mark the last.
- Mark schemes should be applied positively. Candidates must be rewarded for what they have shown they can do rather than penalised for omissions.
- Examiners should mark according to the mark scheme not according to their perception of where the grade boundaries may lie.
- There is no ceiling on achievement. All marks on the mark scheme should be used appropriately.
- All the marks on the mark scheme are designed to be awarded. Examiners should always award full marks if deserved, i.e. if the answer matches the mark scheme. Examiners should also be prepared to award zero marks if the candidate's response is not worthy of credit according to the mark scheme.
- Where some judgement is required, mark schemes will provide the principles by which marks will be awarded and exemplification may be limited.
- When examiners are in doubt regarding the application of the mark scheme to a candidate's response, the team leader must be consulted.
- Crossed out work should be marked UNLESS the candidate has replaced it with an alternative response.

Specific Marking Guidance

When deciding how to reward an answer, examiners should consult both the indicative content and the associated marking grid(s). When using a levels-based mark scheme, the 'best fit' approach should be used.

- Examiners should first decide which descriptor most closely matches the answer and place it in that level.
- The mark awarded within the level will be decided based on the quality of the answer and will be modified according to how securely all bullet points are displayed at that level.
- Indicative content is exactly that – they are factual points that candidates are likely to use to construct their answer.
- It is possible for an answer to be constructed without mentioning some or all of these points, as long as they provide alternative responses to the indicative content that fulfils the requirements of the question. It is the examiner's responsibility to apply their professional judgement to the candidate's response in determining if the answer fulfils the requirements of the question.

Placing a mark within a level

- Examiners should first decide which descriptor most closely matches the answer and place it in that level. The mark awarded within the level will be decided based on the quality of the answer and will be modified according to how securely all bullet points are displayed at that level.
- In cases of uneven performance, the points above will still apply. Candidates will be placed in the level that best describes their answer according to the descriptors in that level. Marks will be awarded towards the top or bottom of that level depending on how they have evidenced each of the descriptor bullet points.
- If the candidate's answer meets the requirements fully, markers should be prepared to award full marks within the level. The top mark in the level is used for work that is as good as can realistically be expected within that level.

Paper 2 Mark Scheme

The table below shows the number of raw marks allocated for each question in this mark scheme.

In responses to the question, examiners should be aware of the different ways candidates may structure their responses. There should be sufficient evidence analysing both language and structure to reward responses. Responses that are unbalanced cannot access Level 3 or above, where analysis of both language and structure is required.

| 3        | Reward responses that analyse how the text uses language and structure to interest and engage the reader. Responses may include the following points about the language of the text: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>the numbers used at the beginning of the extract create a factual tone: 'Thirteen people died, hundreds were injured, and damage estimated at more than £100 million'</li> <li>the writer uses hyperbole to emphasise the drama and shock this event has caused: 'more than £100 million', 'worst trail of devastation and chaos', 'countless families', 'living a nightmare', 'Thousands of trees, torn from their roots', 'ripped out of the grounds', '"will never be the same again in our lifetime"'</li> <li>the writer uses language associated with destruction and damage to show the negative impact of the event: 'damage', 'devastation', 'chaos', 'debris', 'wreaked destruction', 'disaster'</li> <li>this is also emphasised by the use of nouns and verbs that demonstrate disorder and confusion: 'chaos', 'havoc', 'state of emergency', 'panicked'</li> <li>personification (or images that could be described as personification) is used to connect the reader to the idea of the lack of control that objects had in the storm by showing the impact on them: 'huge ships lay stranded, thrown on beaches by the ferocious storms which came out of the night', 'left the south paralysed', 'the vessel was snatched by the wind'</li> <li>images of fragility demonstrate that it was impossible to avoid the damage when faced by the power of the storm: 'thrown on beaches', 'snatched by the wind', 'collapsed like cards'</li> <li>the use of quantifiers demonstrates the scope and scale of the damage and destruction caused: 'countless', 'many', 'millions'</li> <li>the impact of the damage is highlighted by the use of negative language and descriptions, showing loss or lack of ability to do something: 'homeless or without electricity', 'forced to close down', 'suspended business', 'might never be repaired or forgotten'</li> <li>the devastation caused by the storm is intensified by the use of language associated with fear: 'terrifying winds', 'panicked', 'living a nightmare', 'profoundly distressed'</li> <li>the writer uses aggressive and violent verbs to demonstrate the ferocity of the storm: 'scythed', 'torn off', 'battled', 'blacked out', 'snatched', 'torn from', 'battered', 'ripped out', 'battering'</li> <li>the writer uses language that suggests the negative viewpoint that not enough was being done to help and that warnings were not given: 'a Cabinet crisis meeting held back from declaring a state of emergency or the promise of Government money', 'there was no proper forecast warning', 'only an hour or so after TV weather forecasters had predicted "windy weather" but nothing more'</li> <li>language linked to restriction and lack of control demonstrates the negative impact of the hurricane: 'lay stranded', 'transport systems halted', 'forced to close down', 'London's Underground system was halted', 'suspended business', 'closed until further notice'</li> </ul> |

- the images the writer uses to demonstrate the impact of the storm on the trees indicate the force of two types of nature in conflict with each other and the powerlessness to do anything: 'Thousands of trees, torn from their roots', 'ripped out of the grounds', "'it will take years and years to regrow the trees'"
- the use of simile demonstrates the extremes of emotion the staff at Kew Gardens feel about the loss of the trees: "'it is like our children are gone'"
- the use of the verb 'maintained' to describe the statement by the Home Secretary suggests that the Home Secretary is trying to convince people that there is no need for panic.

Responses may include the following points about the structure of the text:

- the writer uses rule of three in the opening of the extract in order to create a vivid and shocking image right from the beginning: 'Thirteen people died, hundreds were injured, and damage estimated at more than £100 million'
- the fact that the writer uses death and injury at the start of the extract creates a dramatic and shocking opening; this could also be emphasised by the use of the number thirteen, which in superstition is seen as 'unlucky for some'
- the writer repeats 'million' to demonstrate the huge impact this has had on the country: '£100 million', 'millions of people', 'millions in lost trade', 'worth millions'
- the repetition of the superlative 'worst' emphasises the dramatic impact of the events: 'worst trail of devastation', 'worst in living memory'
- the writer also repeats the idea of cost to demonstrate the negative impact of the storm: 'the cost to commerce', 'could...cost the economy'
- the use of a list emphasises just how much damage was done: 'power lines were scythed by flying debris, roofs were torn off houses, buildings collapsed, transport systems halted and emergency services battled to retain control'
- the repetition of 'collapsed' highlights just how much has been lost as it suggests complete breakdown: 'buildings collapsed', 'greenhouses worth millions collapsed like cards'
- the writer also uses a list to demonstrate the scope of the damage caused to the transport network: 'Trains into and out of London were cancelled for several hours, ferries were out of service and Britain's two largest airports, Heathrow and Gatwick, experienced long delays'
- the writer varies sentence starts to build a sense of events happening at a swift pace, using conjunctions to create a dramatic tone: 'And the cost to commerce and businesses', 'But the 100mph hurricane winds also wreaked destruction'
- the quotation from Christine Brandt uses a simple repetition to demonstrate that a one-off event can have a profound impact: "'years and years'"
- short sentences and paragraphs are used to place emphasis on the feelings of the staff at Kew Gardens: "'The staff are profoundly distressed'" and to show the impact of the speed of the hurricane: 'By 3am the eye of the hurricane read 107mph, battering a path across London'
- the writer includes specific phrases in quotation marks to strategically demonstrate that they do not necessarily believe what is or was said, since they stand out structurally from the other sections of the extract: "'coping resiliently'", "'windy weather'"
- the Home Secretary's statement towards the end of the extract reflects the words the writer uses in the opening with its comparison to war-time, helping to reinforce the accuracy of the writer's account.

| 5               | Accept any reasonable answer based on the given lines. As the New Year approached the snow kept on falling. Ten inches lay on the tarmac at Gatwick: six thousand tons of the stuff had been cleared from the runways but not in time to avoid the cancellation of fifty outgoing flights. A helicopter ferried a nurse carrying life-saving insulin to her diabetic patient. On the higher ground, seventy cars and lorries were released from huge drifts by the RAC. The transport network had begun to buckle. Quotations and candidate's own words are acceptable. For example: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• '(the snow) kept on falling' (1)</li> <li>• there were 10 inches (of snow) (on the tarmac) (at Gatwick) (1)</li> <li>• 'six thousand tons (... had been cleared from the runways)' (1)</li> <li>• it caused flight cancellations (1)</li> <li>• it was so extreme that a helicopter was needed to get medical supplies to a patient (1)</li> <li>• (it even caused problems) on 'higher ground' (1)</li> <li>• 'huge drifts' (1)</li> <li>• it meant that the 'transport network had begun to buckle' (1)</li> </ul> | (1)  |

| 6               | Reward responses that evaluate how successfully the writer presents strong feelings about an event. References to writer's techniques should only be credited at Level 2 and above if they support the critical judgement of the text. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>the opening to the extract sets the scene for the writer's feelings. Although it is described as 'the story of a morning long ago', the personal account of a family member creates an intense sense of cold and extreme weather: 'a thick counterpane of snow'</li> <li>the use of repetition is effective at creating the idea that the writer felt very strongly about how extreme the conditions were, as she says: 'this was the most snow, the snowiest snow'</li> <li>the events described are from the writer's own words, showing that this is a shared and personal account. This creates an authenticity of experience which helps the reader believe in the writer's feelings: 'we had ever seen'</li> <li>the writer uses sensual images which effectively help the reader to share in the feelings of excitement and 'novelty' she experienced: 'snowballs melted the second they hit the nape of our necks', 'trusting that the mattress of snow would break our fall', 'swirl us around the lawn'</li> <li>the identification of children at the start of the extract vividly evokes the excitement and playfulness they have when snow falls, and this is supported by the child-like language and behaviour: 'the snowiest snow', 'freezing snowballs', 'we tipped backwards on to the lawn, arms outstretched like acrobats', 'giddy with the novelty of it all'</li> <li>the writer's opening shows novelty and excitement at the extreme conditions. The event was unexpected yet exciting and leads them to be resourceful, finding an old toilet seat to make a sledge out of: 'an old abandoned wooden lavatory seat that we found in the back of a barn'</li> <li>the tone shifts when the writer begins to talk about the impact on families and friends more broadly as time goes on, as the language reflectively shows that not everyone enjoyed the events. Strong language shows that some people felt very extreme emotions about the impact of the conditions: 'faced disaster', 'trapped', 'prisons', 'escape'</li> <li>the writer's reference to the festive time of year is effective at indicating how emotional people are likely to be, as this is a time of year associated with being with family and friends and any impact on this can be very difficult, for positive or negative reasons: 'some unable to get to the holiday sanctuaries they had intended to visit', 'trapped in family prisons from which they longed to escape'</li> <li>the writer structures the piece to move from the initial excitement and novelty of the weather to the negative impacts on a festive holiday, to the wider effects in different places, showing the spread of the impact. This shows that the negative starts to take over as the extract goes on, building a sense of foreboding: 'On 27 December The Times reported that every single county in England had been affected in some way'</li> <li>the idea that unusual events happen because of the weather event creates a sense of tension and mystery, as the reader feels that these are incredible circumstances and could be unsafe: 'it had become possible to walk a full mile on ice from the beach out into the open sea', 'in case the animals made a dash for freedom and skated across the frozen moat'</li> <li>the writer's focus on the unusual events could also possibly build feelings of impending danger: 'Mini icebergs were seen floating', 'the sea in Poole Harbour froze over for the second time in a quarter of a century, with giant floes floating in the freezing water'</li> </ul> |

In responses to the following question, examiners should be aware of the different ways candidates may structure their responses. There should be sufficient evidence in the response analysing each text, and comparing the texts to reward responses.

Responses that are unbalanced will not be able to access Level 3 or above, where explanation of writers' ideas and perspectives is required alongside a range of comparisons between texts.

| 7(b)     | Reward responses that compare how each writer presents ideas and perspectives about difficult situations. Responses may include: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• in both texts the writers show the negative impact of an unexpected event. In Text 1 it is a hurricane that causes a 'trail of devastation and chaos', and in Text 2 it is extreme snow that causes people to be 'trapped in family prisons from which they longed to escape'</li> <li>• in both texts the difficulties are presented as affecting families negatively, as Text 1 says 'countless families were homeless or without electricity' and Text 2 says 'Families and friends ... faced disaster' and were 'trapped in family prisons'</li> <li>• both texts demonstrate how the weather causes difficulties to transport for essential purposes and daily activities become impossible, as in Text 1 the writer says 'many roads remained blocked by debris' and 'transport systems halted', and in Text 2 'main roads became blocked, vehicles were abandoned'</li> <li>• both writers demonstrate that people work hard to attempt to alleviate the difficulties caused by the extreme situations, as in Text 1 the government meet for a 'crisis meeting', emergency services help out and the Home Secretary describes them as "'coping resiliently'" and in Text 2 zookeepers 'were on twenty-four-hour patrol', the RAC issue warnings and 'A helicopter ferried a nurse carrying life-saving insulin to her diabetic patient'</li> <li>• the situations also make social activities difficult or impossible for people, as Text 1 says 'ferries were out of service and Britain's two largest airports, Heathrow and Gatwick, experienced long delays', and Text 2 says that families were 'unable to get to the holiday sanctuaries they had intended to visit' and that there was 'cancellation of fifty outgoing flights'</li> <li>• both texts demonstrate that the challenging weather causes severe difficulties to nature and the environment. In Text 1 'A third of the trees which have stood at Kew for hundreds of years were ripped out of the grounds' and in Text 2 'The wings of trapped seagulls could be seen pointing up at the sky like miniature sails' and 'Kingfishers, waders and wildfowl died in their hundreds of thousands'</li> <li>• in both texts the difficulties are caused to communications, although in Text 1 there is more focus on business communication as the writer says 'the cost to commerce and businesses which were forced to close down as communications blacked out, could also cost the economy millions in lost trade'. In Text 2 the communications affected are more social, as families are unable to get together and have to find other ways of meeting friends, 'drove their cars across the frozen river to meet friends living on the opposite side'</li> <li>• both texts show that the difficulties caused are costly, although Text 1 shows this more explicitly than in Text 2. Text 1 says 'damage estimated at more than £100 million' and indicates that government should offer money to help, saying there is a lack of 'promise of Government money to help clear up the havoc'. In Text 2 the costly implications of the difficult situations is more implied, 'the cancellation of fifty outgoing flights'</li> </ul> |

- while Text 1 shows that the event that caused the difficulties was short and sudden, 'ferocious storms which came out of the night', Text 2 indicates the difficulties build up over time, as the writer says 'As the New Year approached the snow kept on falling'
- although the events are different in length, both texts show that the difficulties caused are long-term. Text 1 says 'wreaked destruction which might never be repaired or forgotten' and "'Kew Gardens will never be the same again in our lifetime'", and Text 2 says 'Kingfishers, waders and wildfowl died in their hundreds of thousands'
- in Text 1 the difficult situation is presented as never happening before, at least due to weather, as the writer says 'the worst trail of devastation and chaos in southern England since the last war' and the storm was the 'worst in living memory'. In Text 2, the writer indicates that the difficult situation is not unusual, but is extreme: 'our grandmother had woken beneath the not-quite-leak-proof ceiling of her bedroom to find she was lying under a thick counterpane of snow'
- both texts demonstrate that the difficult situations cause injury and death, although in Text 1 the focus is on people, 'Thirteen people died, hundreds were injured', and in Text 2 the focus is on people and birds, 'A helicopter ferried a nurse carrying life-saving insulin to her diabetic patient', 'Kingfishers, waders and wildfowl died in their hundreds of thousands'
- in Text 1 the writer is talking about an event that has only recently happened, 'the hurricane winds yesterday', which could impact on their perspective as it is very 'fresh' in the mind, whereas the writer in Text 2 is talking from reflective experience looking back on the events historically
- in Text 1 the difficult situation is shown to affect the south of England, whereas in Text 2 it affects the whole country. Text 1 says 'southern England' and 'left the south paralysed', whereas Text 2 says that although areas in the south were hit most, 'every single county in England had been affected in some way'
- the writer in Text 1 presents the situation as made even more difficult for people as it was unexpected and no warning was given: 'there was no proper forecast warning', and 'TV weather forecasters had predicted "windy weather" but nothing more'. In Text 2, the difficulties occur over a longer period of time and more warnings were given to people: 'The RAC had put out a warning'
- both texts use language that shows the disaster caused by the situations, although in Text 1 it is more extreme than in Text 2. Text 1 uses language like 'devastation and chaos', 'emergency', 'panicked', 'nightmare', 'swathe of destruction', whereas in Text 2 the writer uses 'trapped' and 'disenchanted'
- in Text 1 the difficult situation is described only in negative terms, with the storm presented as an attacker causing physical abuse. The writer says 'thrown on beaches by the ferocious storms', 'battled to retain control of a disaster', 'the vessel was snatched by the wind' and 'battering a path'. In contrast, Text 2 shows that there are attempts to make the best of the difficult situation, as the writer says the children were sledging using a toilet seat, 'giddy with the novelty of it all' and drivers took the opportunity to drive 'across the frozen river to meet friends living on the opposite side'.
